TWO FACES OF CONCERN

AT THE American Legion post in Carmel Thursday afternoon, Vietnam vet Michael Bloom (left) worked on the monthly newsletter while he watched TV coverage of the American invasion of Iraq with great concern for his son, also named Michael, who is a C-130 pilot with the U.S. Air Force in Oman. Bloom wants his son to come home soon but said he was "greatly relieved" when the fighting started because "the United States was at last taking control of the situation."

Jerri Masten (right), of Palo Colorado, was one of a handful of protesters who gathered in Devendorf Park later in the day, demanding that the U.S. government bring the troops home immediately. With incense wafting in the air, the protesters sang "We Shall Overcome" and asked passing motorists to honk their agreement. A few did.

Smaller, cheaper BID proposed

By TAMARA GRIPPI

SUPPORTERS OF a business improvement district are canvassing downtown Carmel with a revamped proposal to generate marketing dollars by imposing much lower fees on business owners than the plan that sparked vocal opposition two years ago.

Members of the Business Improvement District Action Committee made their case to the members of the Carmel Business Association March 18. Merv Sutton, chairman of the committee, explained that the BID would likely bring in $250,000 — roughly half the estimate of the original proposal — if put into effect this year.

Under the new plan, the assessment formula would be

Board votes to overturn water transfer ban

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SAME board that banned water transfers more than a year ago this week voted unanimously to overturn the ban.

In an effort to settle a lawsuit filed last May by six Peninsula cities against the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, directors decided to rescind the ordinance while a consultant conducts an environmental study on water transfers.

The water transfer ban would end in mid-May, pending a final vote next month. But the water board delayed signing a contract with the firm slated to do the study in hope of cutting costs and possibly narrowing the EIR's scope.

CRUISE SHIP'S WASTEWATER A DROP IN THE BUCKET

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CONTROVERSY surrounding the release of 34,300 gallons of treated wastewater by a cruise ship into the "pristine waters" of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary last October overlooked the fact that more than 20 million gallons of treated sewage from Peninsula cities are released into the sanctuary every day during the winter.

Crystal Cruises — which has been banned from calling at Monterey for the next 15 years for violating its agreement with the city not to release anything into Monterey Bay — said its on-board sewage treatment plant is as good as systems used onshore.

"Our two-part process is similar to municipal systems," said Mimi Weisband, spokeswoman for Crystal Cruises.

Other cruise ships go even further and have treatment systems which produce water much cleaner than required by state and federal law for release into the ocean.

According to Weisband, the water released from the Crystal Harmony 14 miles off the Big Sur coast last October had been treated on the ship to a level called "secondary" — the same process employed by the Carmel Area Wastewater District and the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency, which handle almost all the sewage from the Monterey Peninsula.

At local treatment plants, wastewater flows from sewer mains into sedimentation tanks which rely on gravity to remove 50 to 60 percent of the solid waste. "The heavy stuff sinks and the light stuff floats," explained Bob Jaques, director of engineering for MRWPCA. After being separated from the water, some of the solids are turned into fertilizer.

Micro-organisms then digest the remaining, dissolved waste in the liquid sewage.

After undergoing this two-part process, the water is treated with chlorine to kill bacteria before being released into Monterey Bay.

The Carmel area outfall is just 30 feet deep, 300 feet offshore from the south end of Carmel River State Beach.

Monterey Regional's treated water is discharged two miles offshore in central Monterey Bay at a depth of 100 feet.

Both sewage treatment plants also have more advanced facilities that can produce clean water for irrigation.

Reclaimed water from the Carmel plant is pumped to Del Monte Forest and used for the golf courses — but only during dry months. The Monterey Regional's recycled water is pumped to Castroville and used on crops.

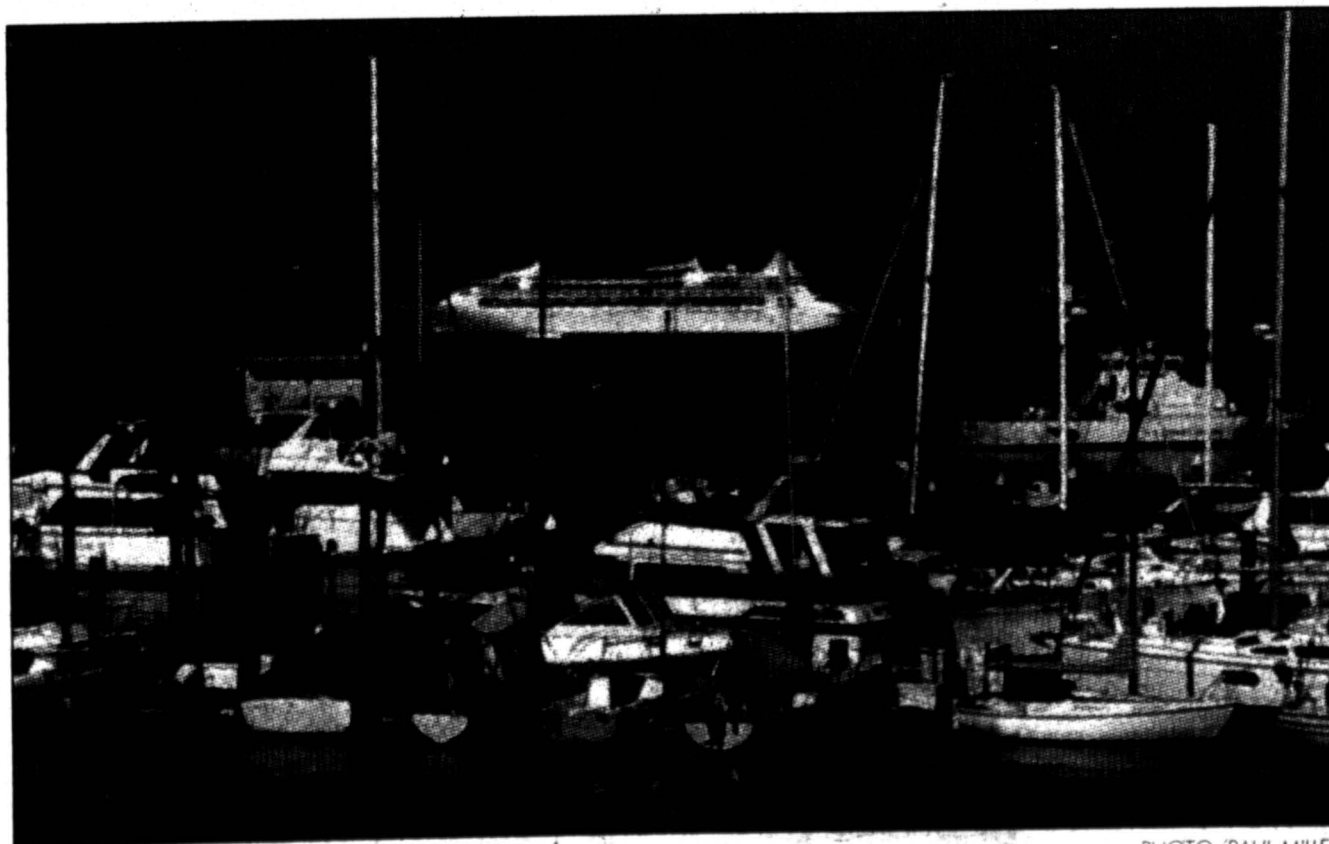

However, during the winter, when rain falls, the demand for recycled water diminishes.

"In December and January we're typically not recycling anything," said Jaques. During those months, 21 million gallons a day — treated by the less-advanced, two-part process — are released into the bay.

Similarly, Ray von Dohren, general manager of the Carmel Area Wastewater District, explained that during the summer months his plant recycles nearly all of its water and pumps it to Pebble Beach.

"However, in the heavy part of winter, two million gallons a day go out the outfall," von Dohren said.

The advent of cruise ships calling at Monterey has led to an outcry over possible discharges of treated wastewater into the marine sanctuary. But local sewage treatment plants are already releasing more than a billion gallons of treated sewage into the sanctuary every year.

OFFICIALS MEET FACE TO FACE WITHOUT LEAVING HOME

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A NEW videoconferencing system, designed to cut back on driving to so many meetings, was recently tested by the city council.

The system — part of a $150,000 county-wide project — will allow councilmembers to meet "face to face" with officials from 17 different cities and public agencies without leaving city hall.

Nearly all the cities in the county, plus the county's transportation office in Salinas and Caltrans' office in San Luis Obispo, received the new technology, which is being funded with tax dollars funneled through the Transportation Agency for Monterey County and the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District.

Instead of driving to Salinas or other destinations throughout Monterey County to attend meetings, city officials will be able to participate in the discussions simply by walking to city hall and switching on the TV. In addition, they will be able to use the equipment to conduct one-on-one meetings with their counterparts from other cities.

Carmel City Councilman Dick Ely, who represents the city on TAMC, said the videoconferencing systems are intended to reduce congestion on county roads and cut back on air pollution. The innovation may be of greatest benefit to Caltrans officials who will no longer have to make the trek from San Luis Obispo to attend TAMC meetings in Salinas.

Carmel's video conferencing system was recently installed in the downstairs conference room at city hall.

"It's just another step in trying to use technology to make the city's functioning more practical and more green," said Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud.

Each video conferencing system — which consists of a television set, camera and telephone — also required the installation of digital phone lines, according to Kenneth Kao, transportation planner for TAMC. The project called for six additional phone lines to be installed at each site, he said.

Kao explained that all components are connected through the camera unit, which contains a decoder to compress the video images and transmit them across the digital phone lines.

The cameras — activated by remote control — have the ability to pan across the room and zoom in on people or visual displays. Ely explained that the participants from each site will also be able to manipulate the cameras at other locations to get a closer look.

"Let's say I was meeting with [Monterey Mayor] Dan Albert and he had his council in the room," Ely suggested. "You could show the whole room, people could look directly at the camera. The camera would zoom from face to face. It would be a total interaction."

Ely said he's already participated in several conferences and committee meetings using the new video conferencing system.

The decision to skip a commute in favor of the video conferencing system cannot be made at the spur of the moment if the meeting in question is regulated by the Brown Act, Ely explained.

Those wanting to participate from a distance would have to make sure the meeting was publicly noticed in both locations in advance. For instance, if Ely wants to telecommute from Carmel to a TAMC meeting in Salinas, citizens should be granted the same privilege to attend the meeting at either location, he noted.

The city is already thinking of different ways to take advantage of its new video conferencing system, perhaps to provide long-distance training.

The new technology was first suggested by the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District, which offered TAMC a $75,000 matching grant to install the new equipment throughout the county.

The equipment is now up and running at all 17 sites.

Spring forward.

house at 0700 hours. She was relieved at noon and had just returned at 1430 hours. Everything was fine between them this morning. He has a history of turning caretakers away. Care provider company notified and would respond. Company said next caretaker would arrive at 1900 hours and the resident would be OK until then. He was checked on periodically by officers until the next caretaker arrived.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Anonymous report of a subject talking to himself and acting suspicious. He was waiting for the MST bus at Santa Lucia and Monte Verde. He appeared to be normal and was coherent.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported a customer had been in a Lincoln bar on 03/08/03, but opted not to drive after drinking and left his vehicle. The customer did not come into the bar this evening. The customer's vehicle was found with a dog inside, presumably for the past 24 hours. Access was made and the subject took custody of the dog at 0220 hours. A note was

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male, age 36, stopped at San Antonio and Ocean and cited for driving under the influence with a blood alcohol content over .08 percent. Vehicle was a 1989 Plymouth Grand Voyager. Vehicle towed and stored by Carmel Chevron.

Contacted a resident at her home but was advised he was unable to respond due to caring for a disabled family member. Courtesy transport provided for the female to her residence.

Pebble Beach: Manager of the Spanish Bay Inn maintenance department reported a burglary at their maintenance yard. A lawn vehicle was removed from the storage area. The suspects were not able to start it and left it at the scene.

Big Sur: A hiker in Los Padres National Forest called from a cell phone and reported someone had fallen 200 feet down a cliff off of the Pine Ridge Trail and appeared to be unconscious. Subsequent information received that he was conscious and had suffered head injuries. Search and rescue team was activated and hiked into the forest. The victim was given first aid by Fire and was carried out to AMR ambulance by the rescue team. He was then flown to Santa Clara Valley Medical center by CHP helicopter. He said he was hiking with friends and was on his way out of the forest when a friend fell 15 to 20 feet. The victim went to help the other person, who was not injured, and he tripped and fell approximately 200 feet down onto the Pine Ridge Trail. Victim had numerous injuries from his fall.

Carmel area: Staff at the Highlands Inn reported a trespasser who was acting strangely. Male subject was contacted and asked to leave the property. He complied.

Clowns, magicians and a giant dog show kids fire's no joke

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SIZZLES THE Clown and her hobo buddy, Charcoal, joined General Knowledge, Seatbelt Sally ("from Two Strap, Texas, don't ya know?") and a giant spotted dog at Robert Louis Stevenson Lower School this week to put a new twist on the old advice to stop, drop and roll.

"There are only so many times we can take the fire engine out before it becomes old hat, so we're looking at new and different ways to get the safety message across to children," said Cheryl Goetz, the California Department of Forestry fire prevention specialist who transformed into Sizzles March 19.

Using clowning, puppetry, magic and music, the fire-fighters' program brings nine lessons on personal safety to an assembly full of kids in half an hour, according to Goetz. That beats visiting classroom after classroom each day for a week, she said.

Kids are shown how to make their homes fire safe, develop an escape route, know the differences between tools and toys (matches are tools, for instance), be safe in cars and in water, make a 911 call, use smoke detectors, and stop, drop, cover and roll.

Audience members — teachers and students alike — get roped into the show, which helps make learning fire and life safety skills much more fun.

"It's been really successful — this kind of education has taken off around the country," Goetz said.

She said she hopes it will grow on the Peninsula too, as more agencies get involved.

"This isn't just a CDF thing — we're trying to make this multi agency," she said. "It's all about the messages being delivered."

Moss Landing desal plant should serve all, supervisor says

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A DESALINATION plant in Moss Landing should serve the county's water needs, not just fill a gap on the Monterey Peninsula, a county supervisor said this week.

At the board of supervisors meeting Tuesday, county water resources general manager Curtis Weeks said Cal-Am has asked the California Public Utilities Commission for permission to build a large desal plant at Moss Landing for the sole purpose of eliminating illegal pumping from the Carmel River.

"We would hope they would take a much broader view" of local water problems, he said.

Several North Monterey County residents who spoke at the hearing said they didn't want a desal plant built in their backyard without their permission.

"We deserve to be heard and give input," commented Diane Russell, a North County resident. She asked the board to take charge of the approval process for the desal plant to "keep development in the hands of those most affected and most knowledgeable."

"What began as a vague, uneasy feeling has blossomed into a very real fear" that the desal plant will be approved and built without local residents' interests in mind, said North Monterey County Citizens Oversight Committee member Carolyn Anderson.

Although Monterey County officials can advise the PUC on the pros and cons of the desal plant, "the county can not do anything to undercut the PUC's authority," county counsel David Nawi responded.

Supervisor Lou Calcagno said North Monterey County residents have been left out of the loop in development of the plans so far and want to know what assurances the county could get regarding the plant's eventual capacity and use.

"How are we going to make sure it's not just an exclusive facility for the Peninsula built in North Monterey County?" he asked.

If it had been the other way around and a desalination plant were proposed for Cannery Row but would only serve North County residents, Calcagno added, public input would have been sought from the start.

Supervisor Dave Potter, who also sits on the California Coastal Commission, said the commission would have to approve a desalination facility and would provide ample opportunity for local residents to be involved.

The county will have its first chance review the desal plans during the project's environmental review, which will be done by the PUC if the agency accepts Cal-Am's request that it oversee the project. Weeks asked the board for permission to draft a letter to the PUC airing its concerns and requests.

The board agreed, and Weeks said he would return with a draft letter at the board's April 1 meeting.

'How are we going to make sure it's not just an exclusive facility for the Peninsula built in North Monterey County?'

— Lou Calcagno

Bike path pits two-wheelers against fans of four-legged transportation

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PLANS FOR a bike path that would bypass the most dangerous part of Carmel Valley Road were delayed by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors this week. A March 26 community meeting will give the public a chance to have their say before supervisors decide whether to spend $130,799 to launch the bike path project.

'The current path which I ride quite a bit from the shopping center out to Rancho San Carlos Road has a lot of intersections and opportunities for bicycles and cars to mix — and high speeds.'

— Scott Hennessy

The board was set to vote on the contract with Creagan & D'Angelo Consulting Engineers March 18, but members of the Sierra Club and the Carmel Valley Association, residents of nearby Hacienda Carmel, state and regional park officials, and other residents wanted more time to talk about the plan, according to Bauman.

People have said part of the proposed bike path is already being used as an equestrian trail, according to Bauman, and some were concerned that horses would be excluded from the bike path.

But he said the plan can't include horses because the grants paying for it must be used to encourage people to commute on bicycles, not ride horses for fun.

"We know right from the get go those [funding] sources are not suitable for equestrian uses," he added.

But that does not mean the path could be built in a way that might accommodate horseback riders down the line.

"I think the engineering work would be compatible with an adjacent riding facility, and I think there's an opportunity for a joint project in the future," Bauman said.

The bike path would take cyclists along Valley Greens Drive from Carmel Valley Road to Rancho San Carlos, then behind Hacienda Carmel along the Earthbound Farm access road and eventually on a path through currently undeveloped areas in the Fish Ranch and the Eastwood properties before connecting with Highway 1.

"A representative of Hacienda Carmel indicated they would like the opportunity to work with the designer to ensure the proximity of the trail and any potential conflicts with the community are addressed," Bauman said.

Speaking not as the county's planning director but as a Monterey resident who has biked in Carmel Valley for the last 20 years, Scott Hennessy urged the board to move ahead for the sake of safety.

"The current path which I ride quite a bit from the shopping center out to Rancho San Carlos Road has a lot of intersections and opportunities for bicycles and cars to mix — and high speeds," Hennessy told The Pine Cone.

The community forum on the Carmel Valley bike path project is set for 6 p.m. March 26 at the Carmel Valley Trail & Saddle Club. For more information, contact public works at 755-4800 or 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter's office at 647-7755.

TRANSFER

For an estimated $110,000, Turnstone Consulting of San Francisco would draft an EIR to study four alternatives, according to project manager Henrietta Stern, including:

- allowing the transfer of water credits between commercial properties and between businesses and municipal governments, with 15 percent of the water set aside for "retirement" by the district, 15 percent for the jurisdiction where the credit ended up and the remainder for the receiving property;

- allowing transfers with 35 percent set aside for retirement, 50 percent for the receiving property and 15 percent for the jurisdiction;

- allowing water transfer credits only for affordable housing projects; and

- eliminating water credit transfers.

Stern said the estimate provided by Turnstone — a firm recommended by San Francisco attorney Clement Shute and board chair Zan Henson — "assumes extensive participation and text development by district staff." A final EIR could boost the total cost to as much as $165,000, according to Stern.

Several members of the public supported a study but questioned offering the job to just one consultant.

"This looks like just one more example where the bulk of the work is to be done by district staff and then assembled in a formal report by a consultant," said Robert Greenwood of the Carmel Valley Association. "$110,000 seems exorbitant. We would like to know why this contract wasn't put out for bid, [which might yield] a substantial savings in public funds."

And Tex Irwin said the consultant should gather its own data rather than using information furnished by the water district.

Henson said he thought it was more important to get the EIR done quickly than to save money. He contacted Turnstone because the board decided last month it wants the EIR completed by September.

In November, Henson, and directors Molly Erickson and Kris Lindstrom will be up for re-election to the water district board — an election in which water transfers are likely to be a big issue.

"Obviously there will be no water transfers approved until this EIR is done, so to that extent, the longer we put this off, the longer no one will know if there's going to be water transfers," he said.

But "haste makes waste" and "garbage in, garbage out," according to director Dave Potter, who objected to the price tag, the consultant's reliance on district staff and the apparent collusion.

"I'm a big fan of shopping locally and the RFP [request for proposals] process would have gotten us a large group to shop from."

Director Judi Lehman argued an out-of-town consultant would be free of conflicts of interest, and said she doubted whether a few months of shopping around would be worth $20,000 in savings, but Potter cautioned her against being cavalier about how the district spends the public's money.

Rather than hiring Turnstone outright, directors voted 4-3 to follow Erickson's suggestion that Henson and Lindstrom further negotiate the cost and scope of work.

"You two are tough negotiators," she said. "You would work out a very fair contract for this district."

Farina returns to take charge of water district

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FORMER CARMEL Valley resident Fran Farina, a one-time water board member and an attorney known for taking public agencies to court over environmental issues, has stepped in to run the agency. She was asked this week by the board of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to serve as acting general manager to replace Ernie Avila, who announced his resignation March 14.

"I was settling in very nicely and then I got my call," Farina said from the home she recently purchased in Goleta. "The troops are being called up, and I was called up as well."

Farina plans to rent a place on the Peninsula to stay a few days a week while working as the temporary GM — a job she said she has no interest in assuming permanently.

"I am here to help the district at a time when a general manager is definitely needed," she said. She committed to an initial 60 to 75 days but is willing to stick with the district through the end of the year if needed.

"Because of the uncertainty of the situation with the McPherson bill [legislation which could disband the water district], I think it will make it difficult for them to secure a qualified manager," she said.

She is being paid $10,000 a month, which comes in below Avila's $132,000 annual salary, observed chair Zan Henson.

Farina will spend the next two weeks getting up to speed on the water district's most pressing needs, including study of a potential desalination plant at Sand City.

Although she has supported the concept of desalination for years, Farina cited costs as a primary concern when she began her four-year stint as a water board director in 1991. Throughout her term, she favored a dam on the Carmel River.

"I was a dam supporter, but the time for securing that project has passed — we've missed the opportunity. So it's on to other things, and right now desal has the most promise."

While she may head the district for only a short time, Farina said getting the community to work with "an agency that has no friends and never has" is a high priority because a water supply solution may never come to fruition otherwise.

A November ballot measure which showed two-thirds of the voters think the district should be dissolved indicates teamwork may be a challenge, but Farina defended its work protecting resources and encouraging conservation.

"I am looking for community cooperation," she said. "We have to have the will and work together to solve this, and getting rid of the district is not an answer."

Nor does she think the vote truly reflects public opinion.

"The advisory votes I've seen related to the district and water have never been an accurate reflection and thus cause confusion," she said. "There was an advisory vote in 1987 where voters said 2 to 1: 'Proceed with the dam.' The district proceeded with the dam; then we needed a vote of approval for funding, and they said, 'No thank you.'"

Farina does not support McPherson's bill, which could set up a new water board controlled by elected officials from the six cities in the district plus one from Monterey County. She said they would not be dedicated solely to water issues.

"Even though you have a professional staff, you still need officials minding the store. The water management district has had elected officials whose sole function is to focus on water."

Steady river of jazz flows through our village

JAZZ CONTINUES to thrive in Carmel at the Jazz & Blues Company now under the direction of booker/concert manager Gary Hamada. With a steady flow of jazz talent from the San Francisco Bay Area and beyond, this week and next showcases a smorgasbord of regional and international jazz artists. Appearing 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 24, at the intimate Carmel venue Belgian jazz musician Toots Thielemans will be accompanied by Kenny Werner.

Thielemans, who received his first big break touring with Benny Goodman, during a long distinguished career has played with the likes of Charlie Parker and George Shearing. A perennial winner of the Downbeat Readers and Critics poll, Toots is also the whistler on the popular Old Spice commercial and harmonica soloist on a host of film scores including "Midnight Cowboy" and "The Getaway." Says longtime friend and fellow musician Quincy Jones, "I can say without hesitation that Toots is one of the greatest musicians of our time. On his instrument he ranks with the best that jazz has ever produced. He goes for the heart and makes you cry."

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vegrini

Performing this Saturday, March 22 at the Jazz & Blues Company, vocalist Gail Dobson and her daughter Sasha plus son Smith Jr. continue to carry the torch for their beloved father, pianist Smith Dobson who died in a car crash last year at age 54. Smith and Gail Dobson, for many years the first family of jazz in Santa Cruz, performed on the opening weekend at the Kuumbwa Jazz Center in 1977 and shortly thereafter relocated to Santa Cruz where Smith became the first call pianist for Kuumbwa gigs.

Daughter Sasha is currently based in New York City and is receiving rave reviews for her album, "Detour Ahead." Accompanying the Dobsons at this Saturday's "Music Celebration" are Scott Sorkin on guitar, vocalist Normal Neal, bassist John Shifflett, Ben Goldberg on clarinet and Kris Strom on saxophone and flute.

Also at the Carmel venue, the Mary Stallings Quartet will play Friday, March 28. Based out of San Francisco, the Concord Records recording artist is a perennial Jazz & Blues Company favorite and was recently called "possibly the best jazz singer today" by the New York Times. She has worked with the Count Basie Band and pianist Gene Harris and appears next week in Carmel with popular pianist Larry Vukovich and Modesto Briseno on trumpet. For more info and reservations call 624-6432.

Marvin Banks established himself as an entertainer with his first professional gig in 1973 with the Fellows, a vocal group comprised of Banks and his brothers. An extraordinary showman with gospel roots and a vocal range that scales from first tenor to baritone, the San Francisco soul singer makes his Sly McFly debut performance this Saturday, March 22. Third place winner in this year's Monterey Bay Blues Festival Battle of the Bands, Banks has, during a 25 year career, developed an extensive repertoire of '70s and '80s r & b classic soul hits with a slight touch of jazz. Tonight (March 21), Red Beans & Rice performs at the Cannery Row venue. Call 649-8050 for more information.

At Cibo's Ristorante on Alvarado Street in downtown Monterey, vocalist Al James performs this Friday and Saturday (March 21-22). A former founding member of Third Degree LeBurn, James and his current bandmates produce a heady mix of soul, rock, world beat and an occasional reggae-inspired number. The following weekend at Cibo's, multi percussionist Bosco El Gitano leads his Orquesto Gitano in an inspired evening of Havana jazz. Gitano's original style of music is a combination of tradition and innovation featuring the full range of exotic Afro Cuban and Afro Puerto Rican rhythms, all played with an intense world class swing that is perfect for dancing. Call 649-8151.

Special kudos to Carmel High School grad Rushad Eggleston. Recipient of the full ride Jimmy Lyons Scholarship to the prestigious Berklee School of music, Eggleston, now in his last year, was nominated for a Grammy in the category of traditional folk. A member of the Boston-based Fiddlers 4, Eggleston in 1999 released a locally produced CD with former classmate Nico Georis.

'The Way of the World' full of wickedly relevant wit

By BEVERLY HILL VAN JOOLEN

"WHAT'S INTEGRITY to opportunity?" notes Lady Wishfort in William Congreve's "immorally profane" comedy, "The Way of the World." Indeed, as the world has just witnessed, integrity is nothing at all to opportunity. So, after a week's delay, this is the perfect time for Staff Players to open with this particular play.

"World" is complex both in plot and language. The play is also so skillfully acted and directed and so full of delicious wit and irreverence, it is well worth any effort made to understand it. A considerable number of characters sweep through a complicated maze of lies, betrayals and lusty desires. Their names alone will start your head spinning, so get out your scorecard and do your best to keep up.

Mirabell wants to marry Millament, who is the niece of Lady Wishfort. But Mirabell had an affair with Lady Wishfort's daughter, Mrs. Fainall, who is married to Mirabell's penniless friend. Then there is Mrs. Marwood who is romantically involved with Mr. Fainall and they are attempting to blackmail Lady Wishfort-out of her considerable fortune. Meanwhile, Millament conspires to get her aunt's blessing to marry Mirabell, but this is no easy task. Lady Wishfort wants her nephew, Sir Wilfull, to marry Millament and, in any case, has been mortally offended by Mirabell.

Nuances, intrigues true to the time

From the lowliest maid to the prettiest fop, the actors masterfully present the nuances and intrigues of the time period. Garland Thompson is splendidly sophisticated and charming as Mirabell, while Richard Boynton plays Fainall with an impeccable loutish appeal.

Millament (Tami Lunsford) and Mirabell (Garland Thompson) have eyes for each other in William Congreve's "The Way of the World."

The trio of women, who are tightly wound into the two men's lives, are brilliant and all three are marking their first performance for Staff Players at the Indoor Forest Theatre. Tami Lunsford is saucy and coquettish as Millament and Laura Cote is cunningly naive as Mrs. Fainall. Playing the conniving Mrs. Marwood, Suzanne Strayer is wickedly sweet and beguiling.

The target of all the elaborate scheming is the old aunt, Lady Wishfort, played by consummate actress Marcia Gambrell Hovick. Quick with verbal jousts and interpretive finesse, Ms. Gambrell Hovick is a commanding presence.

Rounding out the droll band of bumblerers are Craig Clark,

Andy Obeso, Bill Clements and, as Lady Wishfort's nephew, director Nick Hovick. Tricia Wayne and Vicki DiBartolomeo play maids along with Rita Carravello, who heroically took on the role of Foible just days before the show's opening. Janaka Stagnaro and Bill Pauly serve as Etcetera.

The set, designed by Sydney Nash and crew, is stunning in its depth, quality, and essence of the period. Costumes by Adrienne Wellisch are delightfully flamboyant.

"Life In An Uncivilized World" is the theme of Staff Players' 2003 season. If Congreve's "World" truly reflected the boundaries of today's complicities, what a chaste incivility it would seem. As it is, a few hours respite into the frippery and frivolity of early 18th century England is a happy indulgence. Quills up!

■ The Staff Players Repertory Theatre staging of "The Way of the World" continues at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 2:30 p.m. Sundays until March 30. The Indoor Forest Theatre is at Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. For tickets, call 624-1531.

Gateway continues on path of founder

"Gateway to the Stars" was the theme of this year's benefit dinner at Rancho Cañada for the Gateway Center for the Developmentally Disabled, with KION's Susan Wood as emcee. . . . This was the first Gateway benefit without the presence of founder John Wecker, who passed away last fall. A number of Wecker family members were present, including John Jr., daughters-in-law Debra and Angela, and sons Terry and Bob. . . . But some of the best news involved the center's expansion into Salinas, with a new senior day center. . . . This year, even State Senator Bruce McPherson was there despite his busy schedule; The senator has kept a watchful eye over Gateway for nearly 10 years, being a real advocate of the developmentally disabled. On this evening, he chatted with board members Susan Willey and Jim Langley. Jim, head pro at Cypress Point Golf Club, was recently honored by the Golf Writers Association. . . . Board prez Robert Martin is supposed to be retired, but there's not much time left between his work for Gateway and for Shelter Outreach. . . . Carroll Fergusson, a long-time supporter, was there, too. (Note: her Carmel shop, Adam Fox, has the most useful and inexpensive gadgets ever!) . . . The Rev. Richard Clark came with the mission's secretary Marie Puccinelli and the Rev. John Baldwin, who used to be chaplain at NPS, but who now lives in Chicago. . . .

POET AND AUTHOR'S LIVES TRAVEL PARALLEL JOURNEYS

THEIR MEETING could be described as preordained, synchronistic, meant-to-be. However one might think of it, Larry Lachman and Ric Masten have parallel journeys in life. The journeys coincided one day almost a year ago when they met at Hospice Monterey at a prostate cancer self-help group meeting. Both Lachman and Masten were speakers. Both had been diagnosed with cancer.

The Bookshelf

Masten was diagnosed at the age of 69 — four years previous to this meeting — with an aggressive form of prostate cancer; he has undergone surgery, radiation and chemotherapy.

Lachman was diagnosed six years ago at the age of 39 with an early stage prostate cancer; he has undergone surgery only.

Out of their meeting, a friendship grew. Discussions began and continued, and from their dialogue came a remarkable book, "Parallel Journeys — A Spirited Approach to Coping and Living with Cancer."

Ric Masten is Carmel-by-the-Sea's official troubadour poet. He has read his poetry in hundreds of colleges and universities, is a speaker at conferences and is a regular on radio and television programs. He was born and raised in Carmel and lives with his wife, Billie Barbara, in Big Sur. Masten has published 17 books.

Larry Lachman, Psy.D., is a clinical psychologist who works with cancer patients and their families. He teaches psychology at MPC and John F. Kennedy University, leads weekly therapy groups for those with cancer and for those coping with grief and loss. He is a columnist for the International Journal of Healing and Caring, and hosts a television show, "Living Options." He lives in Monterey and has published four books.

"Parallel Journeys" is unique in content and layout. On each left hand page, a poem by Ric Masten appears, along with a narrow boxed column from top to bottom of the page headed "Ric's Story" in which appear personal comments appropriate to the subject at hand.

On the right hand page, opposite Masten, appears a matching column headed, "Dr. Larry's Story." Lachman's prose fills in the rest of the page. The themes complement one another.

There are 11 chapters: How to cope with your diagnosis; how to respond to the challenge of treatment; coping with surgery; coping with chemotherapy; coping with radiation therapy; coping with secondary losses; the pros and cons of support groups; using the healing narrative; reconstructing your life after cancer; preserving the quality of life for the time you have left; after death — caring for the caregiver.

Few books are so up front with information about living and dying. Few authors are so qualified to address both.

Masten and Lachman will appear at a reading/booksigning from 7 to 9 p.m., Friday, March 28 at the Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. Jack Chaney, a music therapist from Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital, will play some Native American flutes in accompa-

Larry Lachman.

FOLLOWING the recent James Hopper lecture at the Local History Room, Park Branch, Harrison Memorial Library, demand was great for a Hopper book in the library's circulation dept. Librarian/archivist Denise Sallee tracked down a used copy, of "9009," an exposé of the criminal justice system and one of the leading muckraking books of its time. Imagine her pleased surprise to find the book inscribed by co-author Frederick Beckdolt dated April 21, 1916, the year of the incorporation of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea. This signature made it too valuable to put the book into circulation, so it is now in the non-circulating books in the Local History Room. She is trying to locate another copy of the book for the Main Library.

Can you help? Call Denise at 624-1615.

SENIOR LIVING

Uneven talents can still make for good fun

By DEBORAH SHARP

YOU CAN always count on a rousing good time at the Wharf Theater. Its current production is the Gilbert and Sullivan favorite, "H.M.S. Pinafore" that pokes good-natured fun at the British navy.

The operetta is directed by Gina Welch-Hagen, who also, on Fridays and Saturdays, plays the saucy Buttercup, a bit of good-hearted low-life who has her eye on Captain Corcoran of the Pinafore (played by Troy Brunke), a model commander whom First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir Joseph Porter (Ken Cusson), keeps tabs on.

Porter also eyes the Captain's daughter, Josephine (Nancy Williams), who wants none of him, but isn't sure, either, about Seaman Ralph Rackstraw (Vincent van Joolen). He has his eye on her, and she fancies him, but shouldn't because he's socially beneath her. None of this gets past Dick Deadeye (Howard Hinckley), another able if rather despised seaman who casts a pall over things periodically by playing the voice of reality in this tale of happy, silly folk whose self-importance is completely harmless.

With the exception of the Captain, the rest of the solo cast lacks strong singing voices. But they make up in spirit and fun what they lack vocally. Nancy Williams, despite being of a certain age, pulls off the coy young Josephine; Howard Hinckley plays the poor, slightly repulsive Dick Deadeye as an engaging sort of villain; and Troy Brunke makes the Captain too good for words until a revelation pulls him down to his proper station. And knowing, broad Little Buttercup is right there waiting for him.

Van Joolen gives the love-struck Rackstraw the proper earnestness, and Ken Cusson's Joseph Porter, K.C.B., is nicely pompous.

The musical routines are smooth, with nice comic touches, and the choruses of the ladies and sailors are polished and well-enunciated.

Unfortunately, though, the acoustics of the theater apparently work against choruses. In this and other Wharf productions, the lyrics of the women's choruses especially are often hard to catch. However, Desma Johnson's accompaniment is equal to the spirited delivery.

■ "H.M.S. Pinafore" plays through May 11 (except April 18, 19, and 20) on Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 and Sundays at 3:30. For tickets, call 649-2332 or 372-1373.

SENIOR LIVING

Highlands Fire's CHERP taps into neighborly knowledge

By MARY BROWNFELD

LIVING AMONG towering trees on narrow, remote roads puts Carmel Highlands residents at risk every time it storms. To help make sure emergency workers can do their jobs during disasters, a group of specially trained neighbors last week joined CHERP, the Carmel Highlands Emergency Response Program.

"We teach citizens how to take care of themselves during disasters and how to assist their neighbors, and when to contact us for emergencies," said California Department of Forestry Captain Cindy Nagai, fire marshal for Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District.

First formed in 1988, CHERP relies on a network of residents in the three Highlands neighborhoods of Mal Paso, Carmel Meadows and Carmel Highlands. In the event of a storm, earthquake or other emergency, members check on their neighbors and then report back to a block chairman who lets the fire department know where it is needed most, according to Nagai.

The flock of 15 CHERP members who graduated March 12 started training in January, according to Nagai. Captain Buddy Bloxam taught them disaster preparedness, how to take care of themselves for 72 hours, how to deal with hazardous materials, when to shut off utilities, some search and rescue skills, CPR, first aid and disaster medicine, such as how to stop bleeding and assist with minor injuries.

"The volunteers canvass the neighborhood and see if anybody has any particular needs or problems," she said, adding, "What better way for neighbors to get to know their neighbors?"

That knowledge can be critical, because fire personnel can't know the intricacies of every neighborhood, such as which residents might be housebound or out of town, or in need of special medication right away.

"We get spread so thin, it's great to have someone out there watching for us," she said. "It gets us that much faster to the person who really needs assistance."

CHERP's last major activation occurred in 1995, when the area was severed from the Peninsula after the Carmel River Bridge washed out, and volunteers also helped during the 1998 storms.

At work after bridge washout

Sideline in recent years while the Highlands fire station was remodeled, CHERP is now back on track and its volunteers are poised to act again when needed, according to Nagai.

Retired dentist Jim Rossen, who represents the Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District board of directors on CHERP, said the group offers a sense of comfort.

"It's terrific. We were city people, and we moved out here into the semi-wilderness where all of a sudden we have a propane tank and a septic tank," he said. "A storm comes, trees fall down, the road is closed, the telephone goes out and the cable goes out, so you're pretty much isolated."

Rossen and his wife, Marilyn, were among the 15 graduates who received their CHERP hardhats and bright orange vests at the Highlands Fire board meeting March 12.

"That helps us to recognize they have a different level of training," Nagai said of the special gear. "During disasters, you really don't want somebody out there who doesn't know what he's doing."

'We get spread so thin, it's great to have someone out there watching for us.'

The outrage of the innocents

ONE OF the principal reasons to stage a protest is to get the attention of the news media.

A group of people carrying signs can usually count on seeing themselves in the newspaper or on television — an accomplishment that instantly bestows legitimacy and political influence no matter how small the protesters' numbers or marginal their point of view. Being in favor of "peace" is especially effective in gaining the favorable attention of the press.

Students at Carmel High learned about that last week when 75 kids used their lunch break to demand that diplomacy, not guns, be used to disarm Saddam Hussein. Approximately 20 other students staged a counter-protest, arguing that only military force could put an end to the murderous Iraqi regime. The anti-war protesters made the front page of the Monterey County Herald. This newspaper also printed their picture (on page 11).

But while the students showed a great deal of passion for their respective beliefs, and a burgeoning appreciation of the value of publicity, they didn't seem to have given much thought to positions they espoused.

One of the anti-war protesters, for example, when asked what his shouted slogan, "Down With American Imperialism!" meant could only answer, "It's a quote."

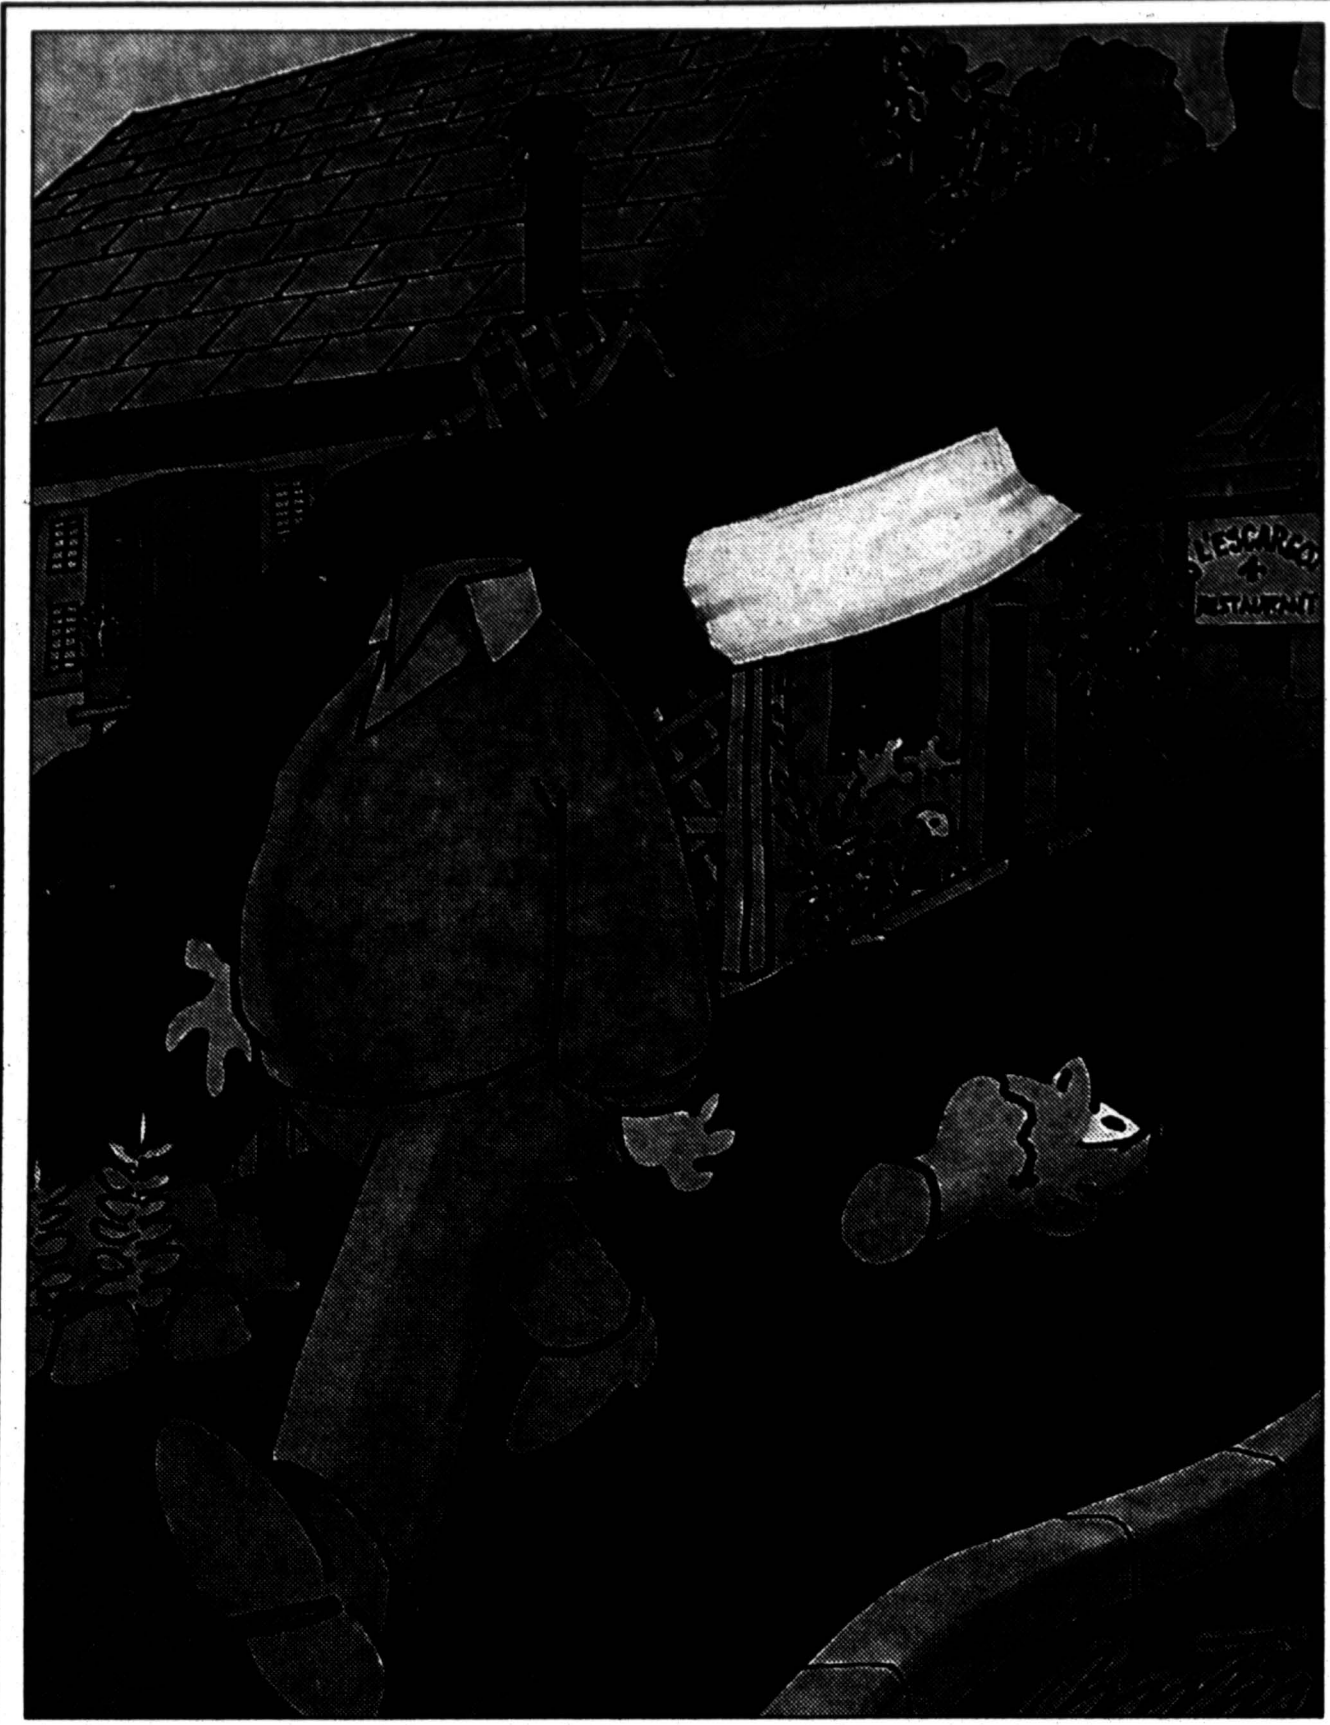

Similarly, when asked what should be done with Saddam, a pro-war demonstrator shouted these words: "Nuke him until the sand glows."

But even if their political views weren't too finely honed, the students were learning some valuable lessons about dissent and decision-making in a democracy. We hope their teachers used the protest as an opportunity to get the students thinking about the risks and responsibilities that fall on citizens of the United States in the post-September 11 world.

And we also hope the teachers challenged the students to defend their choice of issues worthy of protesting about. Of course, the war in Iraq qualifies. But it isn't the only thing — especially for the students of Carmel High, which is facing massive budget cuts that threaten more than one-fourth of the school's teachers with layoffs. Have the students of CHS staged a protest about this dire threat to the quality of their education? No.

With the war in Iraq now underway, it's hard to think about local political issues, no matter how important. But world peace depends not only on the wisdom and compassion of the current crop of American leaders. Soon, the torch will pass to today's high school students. Their education is very important.

Letters to the Editor

A mother's gratitude

Dear Editor,

My son is Cpl. Colin Macdonald of the United States Marine Corps. After reading the article on the cover of your March 14 issue, "Support for our boys," I was surprised by this interpretation. I myself cannot begin to thank my family, friends and the people in my community for their overwhelming support for my son and all the troops overseas. Not a day goes by that I don't receive a phone call from a friend or a friend of Colin's or the parents of friends asking how he is doing and offering their love, support, prayers and often asking me to thank him for his sacrifice to ensure our freedom. I am stopped in the grocery store, the post office and on my morning runs by people who ask me to pass on their good thoughts to Colin.

Carmel River School Brownie Troop 2043 set up their cookie sales table in front of the post office and Albertson's. Alongside their table was a box with photos of Colin throughout his military career — from boot camp to his deployments to Thanksgiving dinner at our home with a bunch of Marine Corps buddies he brought home for the holidays. The box was labeled "The Gift of Caring" Cookies for Colin. Every time a customer would purchase cookies, the brownies would ask, "Would you like to donate a box of cookies to Corporal MacDonald?" The girls collected three cases of cookies and a wonderful little notebook full of kind thoughts from people in our community to send along to Colin. Needless to say, it was very heartwarming.

My children were born and raised in Carmel. The sense of community and the wonderful friends we have all made over the last 23 years has helped us get through the roughest separation from Colin yet. I have the opportunity to talk with Colin weekly. When I mention the kind words from friends and people in the community I can hear his voice perk up and can tell it means a lot to him.

Colin has wanted to be a Marine since he was 6 years old and as hard as it is on us, we know he is exactly where he wants to be. Serving his country.

We miss his quick wit, his gift of gab and his bear hugs and pray daily for his and everyone's safe return.

God bless our troops. God bless America.

BID

based on what each business pays the city for its annual business license fee — which is set at the rate of 88 cents per $1,000 of annual sales. A maximum cap of $2,500 would be put in place for retail stores, art galleries, restaurants, hotels and salons. The maximum cap set for grocery stores, drug stores, gas stations, doctors, attorneys and bookkeepers would be set at $1,000.

Sutton appealed to the 65 people who attended the CBA meeting to give the BID another chance. "It's very important that the BID goes through," he said. The CBA would not get its $100,000 annual marketing grant from the city if the BID isn't created and "then we'll have zero marketing dollars."

Sutton and his fellow committee members hope to garner enough support for the BID to bring the proposal to the Carmel City Council next month. So far, 80 business people have signed cards indicating their support for the idea, Sutton said.

The reaction at the CBA meeting was mixed. Nick Robertson, of Robertson's Antiques, was concerned the BID could "slide" into effect without the notice of many business owners. "There's not going to be an election," Robertson said. "Most people in town don't know this is proposed."

Commercial property owner Jody Le Towt pointed out that California law does not require a majority of business owners to vote in favor of BID. Instead, 51 percent of business owners would have to vote against the proposal to kill it.

"If you don't vote 'no' it's a vote in favor, contrary to the democratic process," Le.Towt said.

WHAT IS A SELLER'S MARKET?

If there is more demand for houses than can easily be met by the number of homes available for sale, it's a seller's market. Sellers, generally, can call the shots in such a market. Often, they are receiving multiple offers on their homes, if the homes are attractive and well-priced. Further, home values are generally rising fairly quickly because of the intensity of demand.

Is this the best time to sell your home? The best time to sell your home is the time when you truly need or want to sell. But the time when you will probably get the best price for your home is at the point when a seller's market is reaching its maturity.

A seller's market is always followed by a slow-down, a transitional period that leads into a buyer's market, when there are more homes for sale than demand requires and buyers have a great number of attractive homes to choose from. Even in a buyer's market, however, sellers of genuinely attractive homes that are well-priced are usually able to sell within a reasonable amount of time. The quality of the home, more than the quality of the market, determines salability. Thinking of selling and/or buying or if you have questions, call John Levinson at 659-8002.

Rob Pitzer, of the gallery, Pitzer's of Carmel, argued that the BID shouldn't be seen as a cure-all. "I see it as a stop-gap while the city is not providing the substantial dollars it has been able to provide in the past," Pitzer said. "If I quit advertising my business, my business will go away."

For the past several years, the city council's annual $100,000 contribution to the CBA has provided the bulk of its marketing funding. However, the city faces a tighter budget this year and some are concerned the CBA's marketing program may be cut. (The council will make that decision before it finalizes next year's budget in June.)

The BID committee's recommended budget for the first year of the program includes $110,000 for target marketing, $50,000 for local marketing, $60,000 for a full-time director, $10,000 for beautification of the city and $20,000 for public relations and promotional events.

At the March 18 meeting, Don Lumsden, of Monterey Bay Scenic Tours, wondered why the executive director of the CBA couldn't also handle the BID. He suggested the BID could spend the $60,000 allocated for the salary on more marketing.

"We have existing people in place who do a wonderful job for Carmel," Lumsden said. "Why have an extra office and extra office hours? Why not keep the funds separate and have two separate boards of directors?"

John Wilson, who served on the BID committee, said the improvement district, which would be completely funded by Carmel-by-the-Sea businesses, should have its own executive director.

"The CBA has members from outside the 93921 zip code, so we thought it was better to keep the BID totally separate," Wilson said. "It's not to say in the future we couldn't merge or combine the duties."

"We feel that people from outside should not benefit from our tax dollars we're putting into this," Sutton said.

Sutton and the other nine members of the BID committee have been personally visiting downtown businesses to explain the new format of the assessment district. While time consuming, Sutton said the outreach has been necessary to dispel rumors and misinformation.

The committee hopes to come before the city council in April with at least 200 signatures of support, he said. If approved, the city could collect the BID fees in June when it collects business license fees.

Committee members noted the city's role in the BID program would be limited to voting to approve the program and collecting the money. The spending decisions would be up to the board of directors of the BID.

Poodles, it seems, have an instinctive affinity for high fashion. Maddy is well known at Saks Fifth Avenue in Carmel Plaza where she once had her portrait drawn by Pine Cone artist Bill Bates.

Her mom, 10-year-old Cristina (now in the fifth grade at All Saints), gets to take Maddy on sleep-overs at the home of her best friend, Kellen Shade. But at home she has a choice of sleeping arrangements: She can sleep with Mom Cristina, with Nana and Granddad Michael, alone on the living room couch, or just about anywhere else.

When she's at home, Maddy likes to play with next-door neighbor Jango Adolph, a large standard chocolate poodle, who is thought of as Maddy's boyfriend. Both grandmothers are plotting to get them engaged.

"Carmel Legends"

Bill Bates is too young to be a legend. But his illuminating insights into the Carmel mystique have forced him into that category before his time. One of his illustrations, pinpointing the ambivalent nature of Carmel, demonstrates it. Many artists, writers and even musicians have tried to capture the essence of this one-of-a-kind place, but few have caught it as well as BATES. You'd think he was born here. Not so. He came from Tyler, Texas, spent some years in the Air Force, was a cartoonist on a major San Francisco daily, did tongue-in-cheek portraits of classic comedians and great golfers. He lived in the South Seas for a time and produced memorable watercolors, etchings and lithographs of the Fiji Islanders. Forsaking his Gauguin period, he came back to Carmel and spent much of the 70's kidding Carmel. In the 80's, he sailed as a Cruise Director for Royal Viking Lines, where he produced over three thousand drawings from around the world. You may know him best for the mural on the wall of Nielsen's Market, a perceptive (and funny) map of Carmel done with Carol Minou, which is a guide to tourists and locals alike. BILL BATES currently maintains a studio in San Francisco, spends his summers in Woodside, and says, "I left my heart in Carmel." You'll see more of him... here.

Supervisors to consider raising permit fees 60 percent

By MARY BROWNFIELD

Too MUCH tax money is used to cover permit costs, the heads of five county departments told the board of supervisors this week. They proposed a 60 percent increase in fees charged by public works, planning and building, the health department and water resources. Applicants should also start paying fees to the county counsel's office, officials recommended.

Of the estimated $22 million the county will spend to review and process land-use development applications in 2002-2003, the general fund will cover $9.4 million, planning director Scott Hennessy said March 18. That amounts to the county subsidizing 42 percent of the tab, compared to Contra Costa County's 6 percent and Santa Barbara County's 17 percent. Santa Cruz County covers 43 percent, he said.

The report from Hennessy and his fellow department heads said permit processing costs are rising sharply, due to state and federal requirements, new county regulations and court rulings. Building permit fees were last raised in 1994; supervisors last voted to up planning fees in 1998.

"An increase in fees to reduce the general fund subsidy is necessary to maintain appropriate levels of service to applicants, provide a comprehensive, technical review of applications and ensure responsiveness to the general public," Hennessy said in his report. "In addition to guaranteeing that proposed projects comply with federal, state and local regulations, staff review of projects is necessary to provide for the safety and quality of infrastructure to homebuyers and residents, protect public health and preserve our valuable, unique natural resources."

The big hike in permit fees would cut county costs by 19 percent, saving $1.9 million.

Hennessy offered a few scenarios showing how the change would affect area landowners. The figures include the 11.5 percent increase in building permit fees recommended by the state, which the board will vote on April 8 when it considers adopting the revised Uniform Building Code, according to Hennessy.

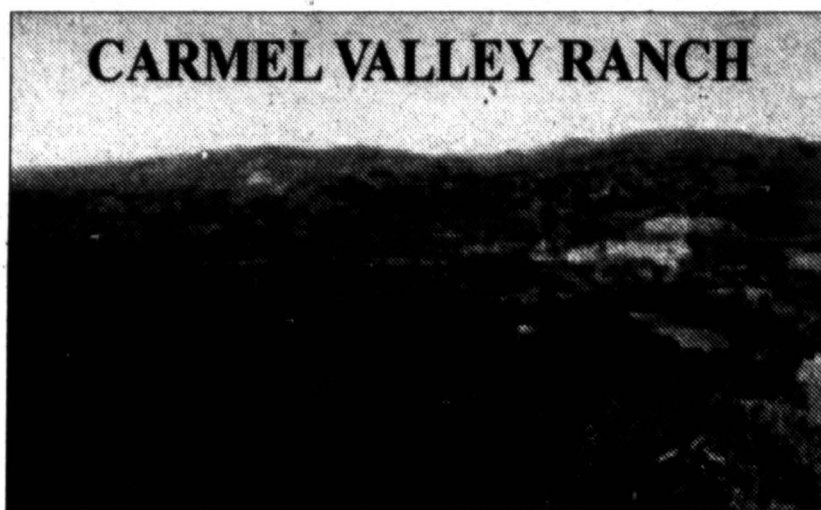

The owner of a one-acre parcel in Castroville seeking to build a 2,700-square-foot home would pay $5,798.45 in planning and building fees using the current scale.

If supervisors approve the proposed increases next month, that tab would increase to $7,765.18. A new 3,300-square-foot house on 25 acres in Pebble Beach would garner $6,606.34 in permit fees today, but $9,262.56 after the increase.

The developer of a two-story, 12,000-square-foot commercial building with a four-car garage on one acre in the Laguna Seca Business Park would now pay $13,077.79 in

"You're asking a valid question," said Monterey Harbormaster Steve Scheiblauber. Since the arrival of cruise ships in Monterey Bay is a relatively new phenomenon, the city wanted to be cautious and asked the cruise lines to agree not to discharge anything within the limits of the Monterey Bay National

Story and drawing
By JACK H.T. PRENTICE
Carmel Cottage Society

BEFORE AIRLINES were leaving contrails in the sky, the railroads were our prevalent means of travel.

The Carmel Development Company sold a one-and-one-half parcel sized lot to Anne M. Bremer of San Francisco for $10 and filed the sale on Nov. 6, 1905.

Carmel had been evolving into more than a retreat for artists, poets and scholars. By 1935, a railroad chairman for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad visited this fine seacoast village, with its forested woodlands, and recognized the serenity Carmel had to offer. It soon became the setting for this fine example of early Craftsman styling on Camino Real.

The estimate for construction was $5,539.35. Hugh W. Comstock was commissioned to design and build this handsome edifice on Sept. 11, 1935.

The lot slope and area allowed the living quarters to be built on the upper portion of the property and the garage at street level.

The architectural styling, with an abundance of French doors and levels, lends an inviting sense of warmth to the cottage.

Coupled with a lush habitat of neatly trimmed oak trees, azalea, ferns and flowers, and winding paths lead you through an exceptionally well groomed yard. We have the present owners, Juoy and Don Wiese's "green thumbs" to thank for sharing this well-groomed property.

Carmel can be proud, too, that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad "stopped" at Camino Real two southeast of Eighth, back in 1935.

Whether you're traveling via horse and buggy, trolley, train or shoe leather express, drop by and enjoy.

Built originally in the American bungalow style, this historic home is one of two remaining original log cabins in Pacific Grove. The old house had a charm of its own, but it was just a shell. The proud owners restored the home, maintaining its historic character. A dormer was added to the back of the second story allowing a 4th bedroom and 3rd bath. Examples of their attention to detail are the 12 Victorian era redwood doors from an old hotel, vintage stained glass pieces from the same era, restored original windows, and Arts & Crafts redwood built-ins everywhere including inside the roomy closets. Another charming feature is classic dairy marble in the kitchen, baths, and on the built-ins. The bay window seat in the upstairs library, 1860 copper bathtub, masterpiece stone fireplace, kitchen copper ceiling, and original pine floor reflect the bungalow style.

There was no indication of any indentation or breakage consistent with an impact from an instrument on the glass or on top of the rubber windshield molding.

The injury was the result of a fall in the garage area of his residence. He and his wife had been dining and drinking at a local restaurant. He refused to be transported to CHOMP for further medical aid. Ambulance personnel requested an officer respond with regards to the situation since the on-duty medical physician felt he should be transported under a 5150 hold since he had been drinking and that his judgment was impaired. Signed waiver form obtained from the subject by ambulance personnel.

The Crooked Fence

Once upon a time, there was a crooked fence. The crooked fence had a crooked gate that opened to a path lined with flowers. The path led to a bridge of ancient stones that used to be a walkway in Israel. The ancient stones led to the antique front door of a beautiful and amazing new cottage just steps from the village and the sea. Inside the beautiful cottage was a perfect kaleidoscope of wood, texture and color. Old world charm embraced contemporary as if inseparable. Everyone who saw this exquisite cottage was pleased to know that finally imagination had returned to Carmel...$2,695,000.
